However, many designers and artists may not realize the fascinating color that lies across from green on the color wheel: blue-green's neighbor, blue-violet. In this article, we'll explore the surprising harmony between blue-violet and green, and how this color pairing can be used to create visually striking and balanced compositions. The color wheel is a circular diagram that shows how colors are related to each other. Colors that are opposite each other on the color wheel are called "complementary colors," and they have a unique property: when used together, they can create a strong contrast that makes each color appear brighter and more intense. In the case of blue-violet and green, they share a common thread - a blue undertone - which makes them harmonize surprisingly well.
