can also allow the representative to sign returns, request refunds, and negotiate installment agreements. Importantly, the POA is limited to the tax years and matters explicitly listed on the form, so the IRS canâ€™t act beyond those boundaries. Only individuals who meet the IRSâ€™s eligibility criteria may serve as a representative. The most common choices are: Enrolled agents â€” licensed by the Treasury Department to practice before the IRS. The taxpayer must sign the form in the presence of a notary or a certified officer, confirming that the selection is voluntary and informed. Identify the taxpayer: Provide name, social security number, and address exactly as they appear on the most recent tax return.
