and Spring (mid-January to early May). Each term includes a short winter break (January) and a spring break (late March/early April). Understanding this rhythm is essential because registration windows, financial aid disbursements, and residency status all hinge on these fixed periods. Students often wonder, “When can I actually pick my classes?” The answer depends on class standing: Freshmen and transfer students: registration typically opens in early August for the Fall term and late November for the Spring term. Upper-classmen: priority registration usually begins a week later, giving seniors a chance to secure needed courses. Add/drop window: after classes start, you have about one week to add or drop without academic penalty. This short window is the last chance to adjust your schedule without a “W” on your transcript.
