Tune in on Thursday, July 23, 2026, at 7 pm ET, to watch the Official Draw for the 2026/27 The Concacaf League of Nations is set to become the most watched regional tournament for North, Central American, and Caribbean football fans, and knowing where to find the official schedule and how to watch each match is essential for anyone eager to stay connected. Unlike the World Cup, the League of Nations groups national teams into regional divisions, with each team playing home-and-away fixtures over a nine-month cycle. The format creates a continuous flow of matches, meaning the schedule spills across multiple weeks rather than a single tournament window. This structure influences broadcast rights, as different networks may acquire rights for specific phases or for particular markets. Concacaf publishes the master calendar on its website and through its mobile app. Both platforms offer a downloadable PDF, an interactive calendar that syncs with Google or Apple calendars, and push notifications for match-day changes. Third-party sports aggregators such as ESPN, Fox Sports, and local cable providers also mirror the schedule, but always cross-check against the official source to avoid outdated kickoff times. Broadcast rights are split by language and territory. In the United States, English-language matches are typically aired on ESPN+ and the free-to-air Fox network, while Spanish-language coverage lands on ESPN Deportes or Univision. Canada's English feed can be found on TSN,
