El Salvador will look to end the group stage on a high note when it takes on Panama in the 6th match of Group A in Nico Cantor, Janelly Farias, Charlie Davies and Rodney Wallace break down all the matches from Matchday 6 of Suriname looks to complete an unbeaten run in Group A when it takes on Guatemala on Matchday 6 of The CONCACAF World Cup qualifiers 2025 are the final phase of the region's road to the 2026 FIFA World Cup, determining which North, Central American and Caribbean nations will earn the coveted slots. The campaign stretches across multiple match windows, mixes home and away fixtures with a centralized final round, and packs a heavy travel load on players, coaches and supporters alike. After the initial group stage, the top teams converge for the "Octagonal" round, where each nation plays ten matches—five at home and five away. Points accumulate in a simple league table; the highest finishers qualify directly, while the next best may face inter-confederation playoffs. Because the fixtures are spread over several months, a clear calendar is essential. Many fans mistakenly treat the qualifying window as a single event, only to discover overlapping club commitments and travel restrictions later on. 1. Ignoring Timeâ€‘Zone Shifts â€‘ A match in Mexico City may kick off at 7 p.m. local time, which translates to 2 p.m. on the U.S. East Coast. Without adjusting reminders, viewers miss crucial moments. 2. Overcommitting to Every Game â€‘ Trying to watch all ten Octagonal matches can lead to fatigue. The mental load of constant scoreâ€‘checking detracts from work and family time. 3. Relying on Single Platforms â€‘ Broadcast rights differ by country; assuming a single streaming service will cover all matches often results in dead air. Haiti takes on Honduras in what could be one of the most important matches for Group C of Panama is undefeated in four matches and will hope to keep that going against a Guatemala side that earned a win last time out. Curacao returned from Trinidad & Tobago with a point thanks to a nil-nil, while Bermuda were played off the park by Jamaica aÂ ...
