Florida employers often wonder whether they can skip traditional workersâ€™ compensation coverage. The stateâ€™s statutes carve out specific exemptions for small businesses, certain independent contractors, and families that own the company. Understanding those carve-outsâ€”what they require, how to document them, and what happens if you misjudgeâ€”can save you from costly penalties and uninsured claims. An exemption lets an employer operate without purchasing the standard workersâ€™ compensation insurance that most Florida companies must carry. The exemption is not a blanket “no coverage” rule; it applies only when the employer meets strict criteria defined by the Florida Department of Financial Services. If you qualify, you can file a Notice of Exemption (Form 65) and keep your payroll taxes low, but you also
