The core filing includes Form I-130, the filing fee (currently $535), and a signed G-28 if represented by counsel. Supporting evidence varies by relationship: marriage certificates, joint financial records, and photos for spouses; birth certificates and proof of legal custody for children; and proof of U.S. citizenship or residency for the petitioner. Adopt a "timeline" approach: start each section with a brief narrative, then attach labeled exhibits (e.g., Exhibit A "Marriage Certificate, Exhibit B "Joint Lease). Use clear, legible copies; avoid staples that could damage documents. When translations are required, include certified English versions alongside the original. Electronic filing (e-file) provides immediate receipt notices, real-time status updates, and the ability to upload additional evidence without mailing. It also reduces processing errors caused by misplaced paperwork. However, certain categories"such as petitions involving minors"still require mailed supporting documents. filing a Description: Can you expedite your American If you're sponsoring an immediate relative for a U.S. green card, the first step is filing The I-130 Petition for Alien Relative remains the cornerstone of U.S. family-based immigration, yet its procedural maze often deters eligible petitioners. By breaking the filing process into discrete, evidence-driven stages—eligibility verification, document assembly, filing mechanics, and post-submission monitoring—applicants can reduce delays, avoid common rejections, and align expectations with current USCIS processing realities. Only U.S. citizens and lawful permanent residents (green-card holders) may submit an I-130. Citizens enjoy the broadest eligibility, including petitions for spouses, unmarried children under 21, married children of any age, parents, and siblings. Permanent residents are limited to spouses and unmarried children under 21. The relationship must be legally recognized at the time of filing. Marriages must be valid in the jurisdiction where performed and not be solely for immigration purposes. For parent-child links, the petitioner must demonstrate biological, adoptive, or step-relationship evidence, such as birth certificates, adoption decrees, or court orders.
