Forming a Limited Liability Company in the Golden State brings flexibility, but it also triggers a distinct set of tax duties that differ from most other states. An annual minimum franchise tax of $800, a possible LLC fee tied to gross revenue, and the requirement to file a separate state return are the core obligations that every Californian LLC owner must meet. Understanding these rules early prevents surprise bills and keeps the business compliant. When you register an LLC with the California Secretary of State, the state automatically subjects the entity to the franchise tax. Even if the company generates no income during its first year, the $800 fee applies, though new LLCs may receive a one-time relief waiver for the initial year if they qualify under the latest legislative provisions. In addition, the helps new entrepreneurs visualize where the state's tax districts
